MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

I am pleased to announce that KAIST will be hosting its International Summer School in the summer of 1994. This is a second time for us to hold this program, and our first Summer School which was held in 1993 was successful due to an active participation of many young Korean students and other interested students from abroad. Now that we have gained a lot from the last year’s experience, I feel that we could offer more diverse and interesting programs this time.

We are inviting applications from Korean students residing abroad and other foreign students with interest in Korea’s culture and society. The main objective of the program for the expatriate Korean students is to enable these students to become knowledgeable and be proud of their mother country’s heritage spanning five thousand years. Our institution aims at giving these students an opportunity to discover their roots by studying Korean language, politics, economy, and society, and to learn about the scientific achievements of their motherland in science and engineering. It also aims to provide those non-Korean students with insights into Korea and its people, and moreover, into Korea’s scientific and technological accomplishments that have led to the nation’s international prominence.

Being Korea’s first and foremost academic and research institute noted for quality education and advanced research activities, I personally believe that KAIST is the most likely institution to effectively combine science and Korean studies into an international summer program. Again, we welcome you to our International Summer School.
